Background:

The number of district court judges in each county is set by statute. Any change in the number of full- and part-time judges in a county's district court is determined by the Legislature after receiving a recommendation from the Supreme Court.

The Supreme Court's recommendation is based on an objective workload analysis developed annually by the Administrative Office of the Courts (AOC). The objective workload analysis takes into account available judicial resources and the caseload activity of the court. The AOC may consult with the Board of Judicial Administration and the District and Municipal Court Judges' Association to develop procedures and methods of applying the objective workload analysis.

affected county must approve the position and agree to pay, out of county funds and without reimbursement from the state, expenses associated with the new position. Changes in the number of district court judges may not be made in a year in which judicial elections for district court are held.

King County has 21 elected district court judges. According to the AOC's objective workload analysis, an increase in the number of district court judges in King County is recommended.

The number of statutorily authorized district court judges in King County is increased from 21 to 23 in 2009, from 23 to 25 in 2010, and from 25 to 26 in 2011.

Appropriation: None.
